1. Applicant's amendment filed March 4, 2005 has been considered. The examiner acknowledges that claims 32-36 were inadvertently not addressed with the previous office action. As such, this office action will not be made final. Any inconvenience is regretted.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 15,19,22-24,28,31-34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Koenck et al 5,898,162. Koenck discloses as seen throughout the figures a hand held apparatus which includes an optical indicia reader (313 in fig 22), a manual input component (514 in fig 22), wireless communication component (504 in fig 22) for RF transmission, an image generator (513 in fig 22). It is seen in figure 1 for example that the display can be in a generally vertical orientation.

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 2876

5. Claims 20,21,29,30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Koenck et al 5,898,162. Koenck discloses that which is seen above. Koenck discloses that the light generation source for the scanner component is an LED. Koenck does not disclose that the light source is a laser. However, laser scanners, laser diodes are old and well known in the optical scanner art. It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to use a laser as a light generation source for the scanner of Koenck. Due to the lack of criticality of the exact light generation source in the current disclosure, and since laser diodes and LEDs are highly interchangeable in the optical scanner art, using a laser in place of the LED of Koenck would be a matter of engineering design choice. One might choose the laser in order for its ready availability, cost effectiveness and its high intensity. Contrary to the current claims, Koenck discloses that the image display and keypad are coplanar, not non-parallel. However, this too would be a matter of design choice, as various configurations of keypad/display hand held units is old and well known. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at time of the invention to produce non-parallel keypad/display configuration for ergonomic considerations as the human eye tends to look forward (for the vertical display) but the fingers are more comfortable in the horizontal entry position, much like a desk top computer.

6. Claims 17,18,26,27,35,36 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims, for the same reasons as previously set forth.

7. Applicant's arguments filed March 4, 2005 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues that Koenck does not disclose "projecting" the visual image onto a planar region as now recited in the claims. The examiner respectfully disagrees. The examiner points out that the display screen of Koenck is a planar visual image screen.
